Scottsdale residents and PGA tour members Geoff Ogilvy of Australia, and Tim Clark of South Africa, are bringing more than golf to America. Ogilvy, 2006 U.S. Open Champion after defeating Phil Mickelson and 2006 WGC Accenture Matchplay Champion, along with Tim Clark, 2nd in the 2006 Master's Tournament and currently 18th in the World Golf Rankings, are teamed to provide handheld Aussie meat pies manufactured and distributed in Scottsdale.

"Living in the U.S., the number one food I miss is a meat pie," said Ogilvy. "I am excited to be part of MOJO PIES and in introducing them to the Americans."

MOJO PIES, a handheld savory pie encased in a golden flaky pastry are available in Arizona and will be distributed nationwide in the near future. Australians regard meat pies the same way Americans do hot dogs and hamburgers, often eating them at sporting events.

Located in the McDowell Mountain Business Park, 16622 N 91 St., suite 105, Scottsdale, or at www.mojopies.com, this product is an iconic staple of the Australian and South African culture and is sure to please the palates of both Americans and Australians alike.
